Safe Harbor Statement

Forward-Looking Statements and Risk Factors:

The statements contained in this release and in comments the company may make on its earnings conference call that are not historical facts are forward-looking statements. Actual results may differ materially from those projected in the forward-looking statements. These forward-looking statements involve risks and uncertainties, including those noted below. In addition, the risks described below could adversely affect the company's revenues, losses and expenses. Investors are encouraged to review and consider this information.

• Demand for mortgages may be adversely affected by increases in interest rates, adverse economic conditions, decreases in housing affordability or as a result of other factors.

- Growth of insurance in force or risk in force may be adversely affected by the factors affecting mortgage demand referred to above, and by alternatives to private mortgage insurance, including government mortgage insurance programs; use of credit enhancements by investors, including Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac, other than private mortgage insurance; use of other credit enhancements in conjunction with reduced levels of private mortgage insurance coverage; holding mortgages in portfolio and self-insuring; and use of structures designed to avoid private mortgage insurance.
- Growth of insurance in force or risk in force may also be adversely affected by the competitive environment in the private mortgage insurance industry, including the type and pricing of products and services offered by the company and its competitors; and by persistency (which in turn is affected by interest rates, house prices and matters affecting when private mortgage insurance may be canceled).
- The percentage of mortgage originations that are purchase transactions compared to refinance transactions may be affected by interest rates, house price appreciation and other factors; and the percentage of mortgage originations that are adjustable rate mortgages may be affected by the shape of the yield curve.
- Net premiums written could be adversely affected if a proposed regulation by HUD under the Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act is adopted. The regulation would exclude from the anti-referral fee provisions of that Act a package of mortgage related settlement services, including any mortgage insurance premium paid at settlement, offered to a borrower at a guaranteed price.
- Loss performance (including paid and incurred losses) may be adversely affected by adverse changes in regional or national economies, which in turn affect borrowers' incomes and housing values.
- Expenses may not decline as loan origination volumes decline due to lenders seeking to outsource more of their underwriting.

Additional information about the risks and uncertainties discussed above, as well as additional material risks of the company's business, which risks could cause actual results to differ materially from those projected in forward looking statements, may be found in the company's SEC Form 10-Q report for the quarter ended March 31, 2002 under the caption "Management's Discussion and Analysis—Risk Factors."
