Comcast Adds CNBC/Dow Jones Business Video Content to Comcast.net – Including Video Clips from Squawk Box, Economic Roundtable Discussion, Market Wrap, and Alan Murray’s Business Day Report

PHILADELPHIA – Comcast today announced the addition of premier financial video content from CNBC/Dow Jones Business Video to The Fan™, the innovative broadband multimedia player unique to the Comcast.net portal. The launch of this valuable financial content is the latest in a series of strategic relationships dedicated to providing unique applications and services to Comcast’s expanding base of High-Speed Internet customers.

This agreement between the nation’s leading broadband Internet provider and the global leader in business news – providing real-time financial market coverage and business information – will bring market updates, home finance tips and personal technology information to Comcast’s 5.7 million High-Speed Internet customers. Comcast customers can conveniently access and view video clips from the shows they trust, including Squawk Box, Economic Roundtable Discussion, NYSE and NASDAQ Market Wraps and Capital Report co-host Alan Murray’s Business Day report from Washington, D.C.

“Today more than ever people go online for information about personal finance basics, such as money management, saving and investing. We’re proud to provide our Comcast High-Speed Internet customers looking for financial advice with news and information from a trusted source like CNBC,” said Greg Butz, senior vice president of marketing and business development for Comcast’s online business. “We are committed to providing our customers with applications and tools that offer true value in their lives. This agreement is yet another example of our commitment to building unique services for our customers on top of our lightning-fast speeds and solid broadband foundation.”

CNBC/DJBV joins an already impressive list of partners showcasing video content through The Fan, including FoxSPORTS.com, MLB.com, HGTV (Home & Garden Television), The Food Network, DIY, Fine Living, E!, and Associated Press.
