Senior operations and technology appointments

ANZ today announced the appointment of Mr Peter Dalton to the position of Chief Information Officer (CIO) and Mr Graeme Hosking to the newly-created role of Managing Director Operations, both reporting to Mr Mike Grime, Group Managing Director Operations, Technology and Shared Services.

Mr Dalton has been with ANZ for 10 years and was previously Chief Technologist Consumer and Business Technology for the Personal Division. He has been filling the role of Acting CIO on a shared basis since the departure of Mark Willis at the end of June and will continue to oversee Consumer and Business Technology until a successor is appointed.

Mr Hosking comes to ANZ from Deutsche Bank, where he is currently Managing Director of Global Banking and Cash Operations. In his new role at ANZ, he will carry functional responsibility for operations across ANZ.

Announcing these appointments, Mr Grime said: "Peter brings to the role skills that will be essential in creating and implementing our new architectural direction and aligning our technology objectives with those of our business partners."

Commenting on Mr Hosking's appointment he said: "Operations in ANZ has undergone many changes in the past two years, with an ambitious program of transformation and re-engineering. Graeme's appointment supports our program by providing specialised leadership for this agenda."

"Graeme has extensive international operations leadership experience across a wide range of banking products at both Deutsche Bank and Barclays and we are very pleased to welcome him to ANZ," Mr Grime said.

Mr Dalton's appointment is effective immediately. Mr Hosking will start at ANZ on 6 November.
