ZixCorp™ Secure e-Messaging Services to be Offered to Bell Canada Internet Customers

Leading Canadian Services Provider Partners with ZixCorp to provide ZixMail™ to Small- and Medium- Business Customers

DALLAS – Nov. 07, 2002 – Zix Corporation (ZixCorp™), (Nasdaq: ZIXI), a global provider of secure e-messaging services, today announced an agreement under which Bell Canada will offer subscribers to its business Internet services the capability to send and receive secure email using ZixCorp's email encryption services.

Under the terms of the agreement, Bell Business Internet subscribers will be able to use ZixMail™, an easy-to-use email service that provides superior desktop-level encryption.

“ZixCorp's services are a natural choice for Internet-enabled businesses in the health care, legal and government sectors that deal with highly confidential information,” said Norm Silins, general manager, Next Generation Services, for Bell Canada.

“We are pleased to expand the global presence of our award-winning product into the Canadian business community, together with Canada's leading Internet Service Provider,” said Wael Mohamed, vice president of global distribution at ZixCorp. “We look forward to working closely with Bell Canada to secure the email communication needs of their business Internet subscribers.”

The ZixMail email service is fully interoperable with ZixCorp's ZixVPM™ (Zix Virtual Private Messenger) solution, the company's network-based email encryption service. For more information on Bell Business Internet email services, visit www.bell.ca/bizemailinfo.
